Find a mental health provider

Telemental Health offers private appointments from the comfort of home

Some people who need behavioral health care may not receive it because it can be difficult to find a provider or get a timely appointment. Telemental Health may be a good solution — and it's already part of your health care benefits. This service uses video-calling technology to provide real-time access to a behavioral health professional — with no travel and less wait time for appointments.
